Blue Angel

A film by Abigail Vallejos & Matías Mayr

Who dares to love an indifferent world.

Logline

After a devastating family conflict, two siblings cross an increasingly empty landscape in search of help for their younger brother, only to discover that some journeys are less about finding answers than learning how to live with uncertainty.

Synopsis

Three siblings, one journey.

Blue Angel follows three siblings whose lives have been quietly shaped by grief, guilt and unspoken emotions.

Convinced that a mysterious foundation can help his younger brother, Roman persuades his sister Amelia to accompany him on a journey across abandoned roads and forgotten landscapes. As they travel through a world overshadowed by an unexplained national crisis, fragments of the past slowly reveal the complicated relationship between the three siblings and the event that changed their lives forever.

Rather than providing clear answers, Blue Angel invites the audience to experience uncertainty alongside its characters, exploring family, memory and the different ways people respond to loss.

Director's vision

The absurd, and staying.

Blue Angel is emotionally inspired by Albert Camus' philosophy of the absurd. Rather than adapting philosophy directly, the film explores how ordinary people search for meaning, connection and hope when life refuses to provide certainty.
